invention relates to vehicle recovery systems.

Automated vehicle recovery systems are known in which a vehicle is automatically stopped in a position adjacent a traffic lane. A recovery vehicle including a sensor and/or camera is then driven along the traffic lane to a position adjacent the vehicle. The recovery vehicle is then manoeuvred into a transport position, whereby the vehicle can be conveyed into a position in which it is easily removed from the traffic lane. One problem which can be encountered when a vehicle is equipped with a sophisticated camera is that of a vehicle occupant or other object being illuminated by the camera. The obstruction, such as a pedestrian, animal or another vehicle, can be presented within the field of view of the camera which in turn can result in the recognition of that obstruction and possible damage to the vehicle if the vehicle goes forwards.-Text="E" />
